McFarland Shows Good Sense in Not Going Out of His Class to Fight Gibbons.

667 THINK I mould give Mike Gibbons | How Footiom Some or a good fight," said Packey McFarfand yesterday when asked ask.
the prospect of a match with the St.
Paul middleweight. "But what's the use of talking about 17 I certainly use of talking about 17 I certainly use of talking about 17 I certainly have no intention of fighting him. If I went out of my class and fought a heavier man like Gibbons and beat him, I'd never be able to get on another metch with a lightweight. I'm a lightweight and I expect to go on fighting mong lightweights. Just now Id like nothing better than a match with K. O. Brown at 133 pounds at 3 o'clork. There's a little difference between K. O. and Gibbons, isn't there? Why should I jump from Brown's class to welter or middleweight? Another thing, the ba lightweight class has been popular ever ince Lavigno's time. It's the best class for a fighter to be in for money making. There isn't much money in being a bantam or a featherweight. There's very little money in the game for wel-terweights, because that cless hasn't had a generally recognized champion since Wolcott went out of business. The middlengights haven't attracted very much attention since Ketchel's death. Papke, Thompson, Klaus, four a claim to the title, and the public inn't very sure which one of the lot is the hest man. As for the heavyweights, a good heavyweight can't get a match more than once in a dog's age. I wouldn't want to be a heavyweight. No, the lightweight class is the best of all. There are so many good light-weights all over the country that a lightweight champion can box as often as he cares to, and get, good money every time. Battling Nelson lost his title two years ago, but he's boxing all the time, and he gets more money out of the game right now than any of the big fellows. I'm going to box as a lightweight as long as I can make the weight. I made it for Weish in England, and I can make it just as easily new. I was to have, made 13 pounds for Wolgas: in Milwaukee, and I found then that the weight didn't hurt me. I'll do it with pleasure any time I have a chance to fight for the champtonship."

But he held the heavyweight championship only one year, and then logt it to Jeffries, whom he never could defeat afterward. He was second man in his class after that.

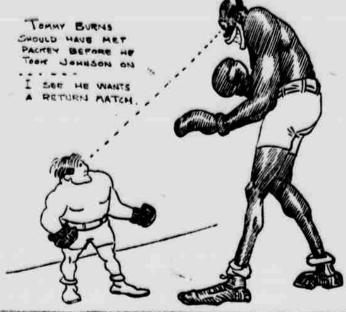

If he had always remained among the middleweights he would have been a champion for fifteen or twenty years.

And Frank Erne showed the foglishmens of fighting out of one's classability he baked himself down to 126 pounds to meet Terry McGovern, and lost because

Then he fought Rube Ferns, welter-weight champion, going out of his class the other way. Ferns knocked him but. These two knockouts took away half of Erne's fighting stamina and made him easy for Joe Gans when it came to defending the title he should have stuck to all the time. And even away back in that Hogan should have had the decision, and he isn't satisfied with the referee's declaration that the bout was a "draw."

The referee," says Boar, "had to caution Murphy about his foul tactics all through the fight."

This, of course, is only Gil Boar's side of the case, and being Hogan's manager it may be hard for him to see the other side at all, however fair his intentions may be. I will say, however, that I can readily imagine Tommy fighting foul, for he has made a great study of foul fight he cases and being Hogan's mine the constantly holds with one hand and hits with the other, which is a foul that the rules need ravision, one facility which one hand and hits with the other, which is a foul that the rules need ravision, one facility where the referee had would lead to his immediate disqualification in any ring where the referee had the slightest regard for the rules.

"IT'S FOOLISH TO GO OUT OF YOUR CLASS," M'FARLAND SAYS McGraw Figures He Needs One More Good Pitcher

Weakest Department of New York National Is Staff of Box Artists.

BY BOZEMAN BULGER. HE uppermost thought in John McGraw's mind as he starts for Marlin, Tex., this month will be the development of at least one good pitcher to add to the present staff.

That's the one thing needed to "re-cop"

Good infielders and outfielders are always worth looking over, especially if they are crack hitters; but to keep the Giants up to championship calibre somebody has got to go out and dig up another strong twirler. Without such a help the manager of the Glants is going to have a tough time holding on to the title. The weakest department of the team is the pitching staff.

Last season Mathewson, Marquard and the ever reliable "Doc" Crandall had to carry the entire pitching burden, and that is a little too much to ask of them again this season. Ames and Wiltse may be better than they were las summer, but neither of them is growing any younger. If Marquard should have a bad year the old "peanut" would go a-glimmering.

So certain is McGraw of his catching staff that he has made no effort to try out a new man. He is quite well satisfied with Meyers, Wilson and Hartley. He had a crack youngster by the name of Johnson, but he feels so strong in his backstop department that he gave him to St. Louis. Eugene Paulet is catcher, but that youngster will probably be sent to Little Rock for another year of seasoning under the tutelage of Mike Finn, one of the Glants' scouts.
The infield and outfield of the team is very likely to remain just as it is That leaves only the pitching department for scrious consideration.
